JERSEY CITY NEWS.

Carpenters Brawl Here in a Falling Building.

At 7 o'clock this morning, while a gang of carpenters were at work repairing the roof of the sub-basement at the sixth street stock yard, the beams gave way and the entire roof collapsed, carrying the men with it.

Half a dozen men were extricated from the ruins, and taken to St. Francis Hospital.

The two taken to the hospital were Charles Myers and John Smith, of 107 Green street.

Myers' legs were frightfully mangled. One was amputated immediately, and it is believed he will die. Malibai's back was badly hurt, but he will recover.

JERSEY CITY REPARATORS.

Two Men Accused of Registering in Two Places Each.

George Appel, an alleged repeater, was arrested this morning in Jersey City.

He is registered at two polling places, from 6th street at one and 8 Hudson street at the other.

The former number is a boarding-house kept by Mrs. Fowler, who declares Appel has not lived there for three years.

A warrant was issued this morning for the arrest of Michael O'Neill, a brother of the Democratic Assembly candidate of the First District.

O'Neill is accused of registering in Greenview and again downtown. He says he changed his residence last week because of his wife's health, and explained the fact on registering the second time.

JERSEY CITY JOTTINGS.

Ex-Fire-Commissioner Henry Windecker has been nominated for Assemblyman by the Fifth District Democrats.

The Greenville district of Jersey City is terrorized by a gang of snafu thieves, who are robbing in all directions.

A well preserved human skeleton was found yesterday in a sand bank on the Newark Bay shore, at Greenville, seven feet below the surface.

GOOD PARADE WEATHER.

Weather Dispenser Dunn was seated comfortably in his large arm-chair in the Police World reporter entered his den on the roof of the Equitable Building this morning.

"There is a storm centered over the lake region and it is a sure thing that the probabilities are that it won't reach here. We may have some rain to-night or early to-morrow morning, but it is not likely to do any harm. The indications are for fair and warm weather."

"Oh, yes; to-morrow will be good day for the parade."

Mrs. Sarah Kibbe-Barnes Dead.

INVESTIGATION BY THE EVENING WORLD.

NYARK, N. Y., Nov. 2.—Sarah Kibbe, wife of Henry Barnes, one of the most cultured and best-known women of Rockland County, died suddenly at her home north of Nyack early this morning.

Her husband was formerly a well-known piano manufacturer in New York City.

Mrs. Barnes' home has been for a number of years a wild spot nearly on top of the Hook Mountain, where she has devoted a portion of her time to literary work.

The greater part of her time, however, was given to the care of her daughter, Grace, who was a pianist and had the finest stock in the state. Thousands of people have in times past visited her mountain home to see her collection of animals and enjoy her conversation.

GREEK MEETS GREEK.

T twenty-seven years of age Guy Kenelon was not a particularly remarkable man, either for his mental, moral or physical qualities.

He neither achieved greatness nor had it thrust upon him, but a star danced, and under that he was born.

This star certainly seemed to be the star of love, for never was a man who was more of a master of the female heart than he.

The last trophy which Mr. Kenelon had attached to his string of conquests was little Barbara Allison.

Her brother Alex had invited Guy to spend some time at their country seat, and Kenelon had endeavored his visit by flirting with pretty Barbara, and in a short time her heart was a conquered province.

Two weeks had passed, when the arrival of another guest, Miss Helen Derry, somewhat changed the aspect of affairs. Miss Derry was a slender, delicate creature, with deep blue eyes and a mass of golden hair.

Weeks went, and poor Barbara's heart was pierced to see that Guy tendered to beautiful Helen Derry the same little services he had so graciously and tenderly as he had to her, but apparently without the same effect. Miss Derry walked, talked and sang with Kenelon, but his most pathetic melodies failed to move her.

Alex, however, was pelted by her half-tenderly, half playfully, as an elder sister might younger brother; and he placed his arms about her, and was ever at her side. However she may have intended the petting, it was certainly having a dangerous effect upon Alex.

On the part of her brother, had pleaded with Helen not to trifle with him. Helen taxed her with being jealous, for Mr. Kenelon and Barbara gave up the task.

"I shall return home at the end of this week, I believe," said Miss Derry at the tea-table, a few weeks later.

Alex's handsome face was clouded at this announcement and Guy looked very grave.

An hour or so after, when he sought and found her on the lawn alone, he said, "I could almost imagine, as Helen said, 'So you are really going? I wonder what the place will be like without you?'"

"Not very different from what it is now, I suppose, when I leave you great an attraction as Mr. Kenelon behind me."

How very fair she looked, standing in the mellow moonlight, fair-haired and white-robed, with her calm, sweet face upraised to his.

"Ah, Helen, Helen!" exclaimed Kenelon, more beautiful by her than that other Helen, who was an angel of destruction to ancient Troy.

Miss Derry turned her head coldly away.

Guy flushed, but making a resolute step towards her, he said, with dignity and grace, that a king would have envied: "I divine what your opinion of me is, Miss Derry, and have, perhaps, deserved it, but when I tell you, as I do now, that I love you, and that I have never told another woman so in all my life, you will believe me."

Initively, Helen knew that she spoke the truth; that, probably, her motive of pride, and more likely from want of interest, Guy Kenelon had never sailed beyond a certain distance on a stream of sentiment, having, when he reached a given point, invariably turned debonairly back again.

"Helen, I would give the world to have you for my wife!"

She turned her face full toward him now, and as he extended both hands towards her, she advanced a step, and smilingly laid her two small hands in his.

"It is more than I deserve," said Guy, gently.

Some one was heard coming in search of them, and the two walked to the doorway just in time to meet Barbie on the threshold.

"Barbie," said Alex, the day previous to the one appointed for Helen Derry's departure, "I've thought to coax Helen to remain a week or so longer."
